FRANCE MAY ACT ALONE IN COLLECTION OF REPARATIONS

Cabinet Not To Recognise Any Moratorium

HINTS AT FORCE

Will Apply Such Measures "As Are Deemed Necessary"

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, August 17.—It is semi-officially stated that if the Reparations Commission meeting today granted Germany a moratorium without demanding guarantees the French cabinet would certainly not recognise the decision. If the decision violated the spirit or the letter of the Treaty by, for example, refusing to announce that Germany has incontestably defaulted, the cabinet, resuming freedom of action, would on its own initiative apply to Germany the measures of economic or financial control deemed necessary.

(French Wireless through Reuter)

Paris, August 16.—A meeting of the French Cabinet, after hearing a complete statement by M. Poincare of the London negotiations and of the impossibility of coming to an agreement unanimously approved the attitude he adopted.

With regard to the proposed moratorium, it now remains for the Reparations Commission to come to a decision. The subject will be considered at its next meeting, probably tomorrow.

In the afternoon the Cabinet resumed its meeting and considered the various eventualities which are possible following whatever decision the Reparations Commission comes to.

Le Temps remarks that it will probably rest with the vote of the Belgian delegate whether or not a moratorium will be granted.

The majority of the Belgian papers criticise the attitude of the British Premier. Le Soir declares that the intransigeance of Mr. Lloyd George killed the Conference.

The failure of the conference has provoked no surprise in Italy where the opinion remains that it is impossible to divorce the German debt problem from that of inter-Allied debts.

In an interview with the correspondent of the Daily Chronicle, the German Chancellor, Dr. Wirth, said he regarded the failure of the conference as a catastrophe for Germany.

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, Aug. 16.—The cabinet meeting today unanimously approved M. Poincare's attitude at the London Confernce and declared itself at one with him in his stand.

Contrary to anticipation, the cabinet, after meeting, announced its decision not to convoke the Senate and the Chamber in consequence of the break-down of the London Conference.

Berlin, August 16.—The German floating debt increased 4,500,000,000 marks between August 1 and 10. It now amounts to 312,000,000,000 marks.

New York, August 16.—The beginning of a very stringent shipping competition is heralded by the announcement that a drastic cut in passenger rates to South America will be made on the occasion of the Brazilian Independence Centenary Exhibition by the Munson line, which operates the United States Shipping Board vessels, the first class fare of $415 single being reduced to $350 return. It is understood that the Lamport Holt line intends to meet the cuts.

DOG DAYS STUFF

By Westa

SUCH umpiring!

Just who was responsible for yanking Jimmy Logan. Hoiby Gallop says he didn't. Very well then, who did? And if Hoiby didn't, who else had authority? Who is manager of the team, anyway?

There is one thing that must be understood in this town if we are to have good baseball, and that is: that the manager must be the manager. If the captain of the team, or the president of the club, or the Number One coolie, or the base ball reporter, or the guy who collects tickets at the gate—if any of these gents are to run the team, then we might as well give up all hope of having good baseball here.

The manager should be absolute boss of the ranch. And if he finds anybody butting in on his perogatives he should demand a showdown, forthwith. The manager should manage the team. One boss, one responsibility.

In the last inning yesterday, with the tying runs on the bases, Bills made a play that for scintillating brilliance will never be excelled here or elsewhere. With darkness rapidly descending, and with two runs on the bases, a soldier batter drove a red hot liner toward center field. The ball, squarely met, was traveling like a bullet, and the two soldier runners beat it fo home with the crack of the bat. The ball whizzed over the pitcher's head and was headed for center field, a sure single, a likely two bagger, and a probable home run. As bat met ball the hearts of loyal Shanghai rooters sank, for in the gathering darkness there was but faint hope that any Shanghai fielder could head off that terrific slam.

But Billsie, good old Billsie, he of the keen vision and the marvelous baseball instinct, leaped sideways, extended his gloved hand while on a dead run, and—smack! We in the grandstand heard ball hit glove, but we could not believe it—could not allow our heartbeats to go back to normalcy until we saw Billsie, good old reliable Billsie, trotting toward the clubhouse with the ball safely cinched in his mitt. It was a beautiful play, Frederick, ol' timer, a truly wonderful play, and one and all we greet you! In all the hundreds of games that have been played on the Shanghai diamond there never was a more perfecy grab than that one. It was simply marvelous, astounding, unbelievable!

I saw Freddy in the clubhous after the game. "Freddy," I asked, "how did you do it?" "You can search me," he said. "I heard the crack of the bat and saw a dull gray streak to my left. I leaped over, stuck out my hand, and—there was the ball in my glove."

Cap'n Hoppy played a nice game in center field, grabbing everything that came his way in easy style. It was Hoppy who put our gang in the lead in the second with his magnificent bust to right for a homer. This hit put us in the lead over the soldiers for the first time since they landed here.

Tom Moseley, Tsingtao manager for the Texas Oil Company, and one of the best pitchers that Shanghai ever had, and who was a star in the days of Dill Beck and Ivy Riddick, was a spectator. In those days Doc Downs was the Shanghai pilot.

Wall caught a good game, missing only one foul fly. The soldiers have a healthy respect for Wall's whip, as evidenced by the fact that few steals are attempted on him In the first game with the soldiers he threw out a would-be pilferer by yards, as result of which the Fort Mills boys have taken no liberties with his souper. Besides he drove out a homer. Atta boy Walliski!

It was a great day for Texas Leaguers, no less. that five of these tantalisers dropping just back of the infielders, too close in for the outfielders.

In the fourth inning Cummings drove one at Hoppy which

Cut Out General Unrest And China Will Prosper, Says Little Hsu In Book

Former Vice-Minister Of War Reviews Work Of Republic And Maintains National Disruption Caused By Selfish Officials

Elimination of the general unrest among the people of China will elevate the status of the Republic and bring happiness to the nation.

This is the keynote of the preface to Little Hsu's new book on National Reconstruction. The author gives, in the opening chapter, a summary of the events since the establishment of the Republic and contends that the reason why the doctrines of both the monarchical and republican forms of government have failed during the last ten years was because their advocates had their own selfish purpose to serve.

It pains the former Vice-minister of War to see the nation disrupt, so he advances his own ideas on how the status of the nation can be raised through the book, inviting criticism, favorable or otherwise, from the reading public.

"The Monarchical form of government had been in existence in China ever since the establishment of the nation by Fu Hsi and Huang Ti over 5,000 years. Suddenly this was changed into a Republic. It was indeed a historical event!

"The start of the movement was made by the Kuomingtang adherents in South China. They were ready to die for the cause. The front line fell, but the rear followed! As a consequence, the standard of faith was raised and victory was recorded in Wuchang.

"The actual accomplishment was effected by the First Army of North China, which was not content to be behind in its struggle for liberty. It issued the call to the other military units, resulting in the sudden inflow of telegrams and petitions causing the abdication of the Ta Ching Emperor. The various changes were made without ulterior motives. The nation was afraid of the evils of a monarchy and desired to have the change for the peace of the world.

"The government changed its form. But what happened to the people? For ten years, the scholar had abandoned his studies, the farmer had been molested by bandits, the mechanic was idle in his manufacture while the merchant suffered economic depression. The atmosphere of unrest was hundred times thicker than before. Furthermore, the families were devoid of cover and shelter while men lost their sense of cleaniness and honesty. The decline of morality was more dreadful than flood and pestilence!

"What the people had hoped from the reformers had dwindled into nothing. So it was thought that the change was wrongly made. A certain clique thought of the old monarch. It seized the opportunity. It maintained that the unrest in the four corners of the nation was caused by the absence of the King. In order to stir up the people, far and near alike, it replaced the baby emperor into the throne so that its orders may be obeyed by the millions of populace. When this doctrine was being advocated, undoubtedly there were retired officials and loyal elderlies who really and sincerely believed that this doctrine would bring salvation to the nation. Nevertheless, those who were actually participating in the government did not have the interest of the public at heart. Neither did they considered the welfare of the old monarch. They were merely usurpers, holding the emperor as a means of controlling the chieftains in the provinces.

"For the moment, we are not interested in analysing the personal ambitions of these advocates. But let us examine some of the conditions. In the change of the form of the government, there were persons who started the movement as well as others who achieve it. The heroes of the struggle were still alive. The sword of conquest had not yet been put away. Would they bow to the wisdom of restoration? Would they remain silent on the matter?

"Moreover, the change had been announced to the world and the revolution had been repeatedly reported to overseas. How can these people suffer the bondage of a monarchy, bend their knees before imperialism and accept the orders from the 'Flying Dragon?'

"Hence the country remained poor. People continued to suffer while soldiers and brigandage joined in prey upon the peaceful. The monarchists sought to point at some accomplishments after the change of dynasty, but they could not.

"Again, some other clique advocated other new doctrines and promised further reforms. The authors contended that the essence of a democracy was in the separations of powers. If the provinces were given self-govern-

NO RESPONSE BY STRIKING CREWS TO C. M. OFFER

End Of Tie-Up Seems No Nearer

No response from the strikers has followed the offer made three days ago by the China Merchants' Steam Navigation Company and no progress appears to have been made through it toward the settlement of the strike, which has resulted in the tying up of nearly a score of the company's ships in this port.

The offer of the company it is understood brings wages up to the figure set forth in the Hongkong agreement, or is even slightly over the latter in some instances. The company desired to present the offer to representatives of the boatswains and No. 1 firemen, but these, after consultation with the Seamen's Union, declined to call at the company's offices as requested. The company then sent out circulars to be transmitted to the men by the captains of the various China Merchants ships in port.

The striking crews demand that the wage increase shall have effect as from January 1 instead of July 1 and that the Seamen's Union be recognised by the company.

Fresh U. S. Produce For All Travellers On Pacific Mail Boats

Outbound Ships To Carry Fruits For Home Bound Vessels

The assurance of fresh fruits and vegetables for home as well as outward bound passengers on the Pacific Mail Steamship Company ships is brought about by an arrangement just put into force by the company.

Under the new plan Westward bound vessels will carry extra cargoes of fresh fruits and vegetables from San Francisco for turning over to the homeward bound ships at Yokohama. Enlarged refrigerator facilities will enable the big President liners of the company to carry double the usual amount of perishable foodstuffs for the Pacific Mail cuisine and in addition the company will continue to bring out shipments of California produce for Far Eastern ports as at present.

DR. SUN YAT-SEN ISSUES STATEMENT FOR POWERS, EXPLAINING HIS STAND

Reviews Events Of Gen. Chen's Revolt And Explains Why He Came To Shanghai; Tells Reunification Plans

SEES DEFEAT OF THE MILITARISTS

Five Years Of Vain Effort To Bring About National Solidarity Makes Them Willing To "Listen To Reason," He Says

Following the manifesto issued by Dr. Sun Yat-sen and addressed particularly to the people of China, the Constitutionalist leader yesterday issued a promised statement addressed to the foreign powers. In this Doctor Sun amplifies the statements given in translations of the manifesto and sets forth the position he has taken in phrasing adapted particularly to the world, outside of China.

Following the lines of the manifesto this later statement reviews in considerable detail the events of the revolt of Gen. Chen Chiung-ming and gives reasons why Doctor Sun has come to Shanghai. His aims to effect reunification of the country and the conditions he holds are necessary to bring this about are definitely stated.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Reuter has been asked to issue the following statement by Dr. Sun Yat-sen which he has addresed to the foreign Powers:

"The illegal dissolution of Parliament in 1917 divided China politically and created the problem of reunification. Constitutionalists have held that reunification could not be effected without the reassembly of Parliament. This view was resisted for more than five years by the Northern military leaders. But the definite failure of the latter to govern China without a legal Parliament has led them to accept the Constitutionalist doctrine on reunification.

WELCOMES CHANGE

"On June 6 last, I issued a declaration which welcomed this significant change of attitude on the part of the men who were mainly responsible for the forcible dissolution of Parliament and who, in five years of civil war, sought to crush the Constitutionalist movement. After taking counsel with Dr. Wu Ting-fang, my revered colleague and sage counsellor, I invited the Northern military leaders to express in certain objective terms their acceptance of the Constitutionalist view. Steps were being taken to initiate formal negotiations on the subject between my Government and the North when Chen Chiung-ming—on June 16, ten days from the date of my declaration—attempted to assassinate me at Canton and succeeded in subverting the Government of which he was a member and virtually caused the death of the most valuable political life in China. I refer to Dr. Wu Ting-fang who died of grief and indignation at an act of treachery which appeared to ruin his hope of seeing a reunified China. His dying message to the nation makes this abundantly clear.

"Why did Chen Chiung-ming break out in rebellion at a moment when his leader and the Chief Executive of the Government which commanded his allegiance was about to engage in negotiations definitely leading to the reunification of China? I cannot yet bring myself fully to answer this question for the information of foreigners. There is a heinousness in the man's conduct which, it seems to me, may lower the Chinese character in the estimation of those who are unaware of the sources of its moral strength. In a manifesto to my countrymen, I have dealt with Chen Chiung-ming's action more fully than I can or care to do in this place. This much must suffice here. Chen Chiung-ming knew that negotiations were about to take place which would necessarily end in the political reunification of the country after six grievous years of dissension and strife. He knew that Dr. Wu Ting-fang had been invited to head a government at Peking and he knew that, in the first instance, this invitation would have served as a basis for the further and real negotiations between my Government and the Northern military and political leaders. But he knew that if reunification took place before he could regain a dominant position in Canton, it would be impossible for him to realise his plan of securing the province of Kwangtung as his share of the spoils in any scheme of reunification. He desired Kwangtung as a fendal domain. That is why he did a traitor's work.

SUSPECTS CHEN

MARTIAL LAW IN PEKING; MUTINY COSTS $200,000

$500,000 Released By Salt Gabelle To Pay Off Arrears In Capital

Martial law has been declared in Peking as a result of the mutiny among the troops of the ninth division stationed at Pei Yuan on Monday, according to the Chinese press. Damage to the shops in the vicinity of the scene was estimated at $200,000. The outlaws were disarmed by the 13th division after being routed at Shaho and Shanshan.

Lo Ching, commander-in-chief of the division, who was in Tientsin at the time of the mutiny, attributed the cause to the failure on the part of the government to pay the soldiers in full and on time.

A mass meeting was held at Central Park on Tuesday, which passed resolutions demanding on the government to meet its obligations towards the soldiery. Sir Francis Aglen, Inspector-General of the Salt Gabelle, consequently released $500,000 of the salt surplus to bridge over the difficulties.

New Club Building To Be Discussed At Meeting This Evening

Members Of Cercle Sportif Francais To Pass On Project

An extraordinary general meeting of members of the Cercle Sportif Francais will be held at 6:30 p.m. today to take up the matter of removing the Club's premises from the present location at Koukaza to the larger property comprised in Verdun Gardens.

The circular mailed to the members of the popular club emphasises the need for enlarged facilities of accommodation in view of the constantly waxing membership list. Two solutions are presented in the circular, the establishment of a new building at Verdun Gardens, or enlargement of the present club. The committee and sub-committees favor the former idea, pointing out that the new establishment's cost will total in the neighborhood of Tls. 450,000 to be covered by the of the present club for Tls. 200,000 and a loan of Tls. 250,000, while the necessary extensions of the club as it stands at present would entail the expenditure of at least Tls. 150,000 to Tls. 200,000. In the latter case the possibilities would be more restricted than if the Verdun Gardens plot is acquired.

Canton has already led me to suspect him of reverting to a feudal conception of China as a bundle of small states and principalities which would find its first concrete expression in the province of Kwangtung under his rule. It is in this sense that I was moved to look upon his attempt to administer Kwangtung as if it were separate and apart from the rest of China under the unreal pretext of making it a model province and claiming 'Canton for the Cantonese.' And I may now state it was this distrust that partly influenced me in deciding to relieve him last April of his high offices except that of Minister of War. His conduct now proves that I have not been wrong in my reading of his mind.

"As a result of Chen Chiung-ming's rebellion, I have been unable for two months to follow up the negotiations for the reunification of the country. I considered it my duty to attempt a liquidation of the military situation at Canton before coming up North to assist at a settlement of the large national question. But I have had to leave the Canton situation unliquidated for the present, because my further stay there had become less imperative than my presence in a center where it would be possible to meet other national leaders of the country either personally or through their accredited representatives with a view to effect the reunification of China. This is the reason why I have come to Shanghai.

"I have, however, to emphasise the fact that reunification without peace is wholly illusory. While the effective resumption by Parliament of its duties means the political reunification of the country, the nation's peace and welfare can only be secured:

(1). By the readiness of every citizen of the Republic to obey Parliament. And here I have again to re-affirm my willingness to abide by the decision of Parliament regarding my own constitutional status;

"(2) By striking at the main root of all national disorder, which is Chinese militarism. There can never be peace in China until the armies of the Tuchunate are disbanded and converted into Labor Corps as outlined in my declaration of June 6;

"(3) By the wise development of our great natural and other resources not for mere wealth but for the contentment and happiness of our people. I count that country great which contains more happy people than wealthy people. And I believe that this end will be largely secured if the industrial development of China proceeds along the lines marked out in my book or "The International Development of China";

"(4) By the reorganisation of our political system on the basis of the District as the unit of popular government. This is less revolutionary than it seems to be. Village self-government has existed in China from time immemorial; and my proposal only aims at the organisation of all the villages in a District into a unit of local self-government in the interests of political and administrative efficiency. On this point I am opposed equally to those who favor the province as the unit of local self-government or who call for the application of the federal principle in the government of the provinces. Where I believe very strongly in local self-government, I feel not less strongly that federalism would, in existing circumstances, release centrifugal forces in China which would eventfully break her up into a system of small states whose inter-relations would be determined by unreasoning jealousy and rivalry. China as a unitary state is embedded in the historical consciousness of the nation; and it is this consciousness which has enabled us to survive as a nation in spite of the destructive forces of the past. Federalism would tamper with that consciousness."

the skipper, in attempting a shoestring catch, allowed to get away. But no damage was done, due to the fact that Cy Wilholt was backing up his teammate in center. It is this sort of thing that makes a Kit with the knowing fans. Cy plays baseball every minute he is in the game.

Harry Klugman got a clean homer in the third, driving the ball to deep right. Everybody is happy when Harry busts one. He is a clean, brilliant ball player of the sort that inspires confidence in his teammates and the fans. Harry has been playing wonderful ball at first since this series started, some of his stops of batted and thrown balls being of big league order. More power to your good left arm, Harry, ol' timer.

Adlinger cracked one toward left in the fourth that was labeled for two bases, but our old friend Billsle, by grace of a sideslong dive, got in front of it for one of those grabs that make the fans catch their breath. It certainly was a field day for the shortstopper.

One of the sailor rooters, Harris by name, kept up a continual yelp for the soldiers. Some of his remarks gave the grandstanders a big kick, too, although he was somewhat off his base in his frequent insinuations that the umpires had been bribed by what he called "the Shanghai public."

President McIntyre, of the baseball club, agrees with the proposition, advanced in this column a day or so ago, that baseball in this town is and has been too cheap. Mac says that something must be done about it, although he doesn't know exactly what. Mac is just like the rest of us who have given thought to the situation. We all know that something must be done, but not a one of us knows what. However, if we all keep thinking about it maybe between us, we will be able to evolve a workable scheme by next year. Mac says he will welcome any suggestions, and that, certainly, is the proper spirit.

The Fort Mills boys certainly are a clean, gentlemanly lot of ball players. They know the game, and play it very well indeed. It is a treat to Shanghai fans to watch the smooth precision of their teamwork, and although it is natural for the fans here to pull for a Shanghai victory, the soldiers must not think for a minute that their brilliant display of baseball technique is not appreciated here. On the contrary, their clever play, individual and collective, is fully appreciated. Win or lose, we are all tickled pink to have these lads with us for a time.

Kiangsi Gentry In Peking Demonstration

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, August 17.—Some 1,500 mutineers of the 9th Division who participated in the recent looting have since rejoined their division, while about 300 looters have reached Annotsun. There they remained until pursuing cavalry hove in sight when the looters retreated to Miaofengchan where they have prepared a defense on the steep hillsides, thus preventing cavalry attack. Rifle fire was exchanged but the cavalry are merely holding the looters while a mountain battery is coming up from Nankon. Infantry have also been sent from Peking and the military authorities confidently assert that it is impossible for the mutineers to escape.

Peking, August 14.—Two regiments of the 9th Division, quartered at Peiyuan, mutinied last evening shortly after six o'clock and looted some of the shops in the street near their barracks, afterwards visiting Chingho and Chaho. The biggest shops and richest houses in Chingho were looted.

On arrival at Chingho they went to the residence of the Chairman of the Chamber of Commerce and demanded $5,000. The Chairman replied that it was impossible to get the money at that time—1 a.m.—and advised them to wait until morning. This did not suit their program and they than resorted to looting.

After the looting about half of the men broke into small groups and started for their homes across country. The remainder went on to Chaho and have since been persuaded by officers to remain there quietly until orders are received from military headquarters.

Meanwhile police and gendarmerie are in control of the business street near the barracks, and a portion of the 13th Division at Chingho, and order has been restored. The losses are said to be comparatively slight, and there were no casualties.

It appears that the 9th Division has not been paid for nearly nine months, and their Commandant, General Lu Chin, in response to a demand for their wages last month, promised that they should be paid before end of July. The two mutinous regiments recently returned from Kaiping where they served as reinforcements to the Chihli forces during the civil war. In addition to the discontent over arrears of pay it is stated that the men were dissatisfied with the rations recently supplied to them.

General Lu Chin returned to Peking by special tarin from Tien-

Berne, Aug. 16.—The inquiry into the so-called Tilinsky affair has been concluded and the case will now come before the courts here. The indictment says that Iger de Tilinsky, who arrived in Switzerland in 1911 and claimed to hold credit on the Japanese Government for 348,000,000 francs, the price for the alleged betrayal of Port Arthur, succeeded in borrowing on his pretended credit large sums at Zurich, Berne and other Swiss towns as already he has attempted to do in England, France, Germany and Belgium. His alleged swindling transactions totalled 20,000,000 francs. Tilinsky, on one occasion, in order to convince a lender, produced a document in Japanese of which experts contest the authority. An inquiry is also being conducted diplomatically. Japanese regard the whole affair as a gigantic swindle.

Cut Out General Unrest And China Will Prosper

ment, rivalry and competition would cease. People saw the bright side of the doctrine, but did not go into the evils. The doctrine was considered reasonable and practicable. But did the authors have the interest of the nation at heart? Did they even have the interest of the provinces at heart? They merely did this because they knew that they were unable to disrupt the nation by themselves, so they sought this means whereby the nation would be divided in so many little divisions that it would be an easy matter for them to dominate them one by one.

"Leaving aside the question of the motive of these advocates, let us again consider some of the attending circumstances. Would the old reformers tolerate the sight of a divided country? Would the people stand for unending struggle between minor divisions?

"In a word, despite the advance of many principles for good government, the nation has become more chaotic and the people was suffering the most unbearable hardship. The real trouble today, as I would like to tell the leaders both in the North and the South is that while the political leaders are energetic in their search for reforms, they have failed to consider plans for national reconstruction. This is why they are able to dominate the country or part of the country without being able to govern it.

"From now on, the question of reconstruction is one of supreme importance. In the reconstruction of a nation, the people must first be given peace and tranquility. To keep them peaceful, they should first be allowed to enjoy their pursuit of happiness. National peace therefore is the only solution.

"When people discuss about politics today, they either write voluminous books or fill the air with their voices. Whether their words are beneficial or not depends entirely on how much good they can do for the people, who are the best judges in the individual cases and how much can they accomplish by way of eliminating the unrest. It is futile to accept an author at his face value. When we judge him with a standard—that is whether his words can bring peace and happiness to the people or not—then it would be an easy matter to classify his work.

"In general, legislation should bring peace and happiness to the people permanently and not temporarily to the majority as well as the minority. The trouble with the modern politicians is that they are not far sighted enough to include the future or are not tactful enough to benefit the living.

"It has been my aspiration to reconstruct the nation for years. But I had refrained from saying anything on account of my own position in the administration, which restricted my activities. However, in spite of the restrictions, I had attempted to do what I could and left those work which I could not perform to a more opportune time. Now that this restriction is no longer placed upon me, I am free to discuss problems and desire to follow the footsteps of the leaders of North as well as the South to exert my power and energy to the reconstruction of the nation with the hope that the people may be pacified and the nation placed on firm basis.

"Therefore, below I enumerate what I know through my own experience and offer it sincerely to the public for their consideration. Although the book touches only the general principles and leaves out all details, I believe the important points for reconstruction have been raised.

"I am one of the mass. The mass includes me. If I carry these principles out and find them beneficial, it is my duty and the people's good fortune. If they are found to be harmful, it is my fault and people's misfortune. I trust that the public will carefully examine into them and advise me on the various points so that I may carry out what is beneficial and leave out what is harmful.

"The people has suffered too long already! Who will rise to the call and work for their salvation! I shall be glad to follow!"

In the 23 chapters which followed the preface of General Hsu's book, THE CHINA PRESS finds ten points, which should be of interest to students to political science as well as those who are following the political developments of China. They are national reunification, international intercourse, social reform, self-government, education, military affairs, national finance, national industry, the judiciary and border defense. Translations of extracts from these chapters will appear in THE CHINA PRESS later.

COSTUME BALL AT TSINGTAO HOTEL AS SEASON WANES

One of the most sparkling events in the Tsingtao social calendar took place last Saturday night, when the annual costume ball was held at the Strand Hotel.

The spacious, breeze swept verandah of the Strand was crowded by a colorfully apparelled throng and the ball room was elaborately decorated, while the orchestra, especially augmented for the occasion, played the latest dance music, which General Manager T. Herlihy received from New York a few days before the annual fancy dress ball.

Unusual and unique costumes made the judges' work difficult and the contestants marched past those who made the awards several times before the final decisions were made.

Mrs. Hugo Reiss, wife of the Manager of Andersen, Meyer and Company of Shanghai, was awarded the prize for the best ladies' costume while the trophy for the most original went to Mrs. Joseph P. Babcock, wife of the Standard Oil Company manager at Tsinanfu. Mr. A. L. Shaw of the Standard Oil Company at Pengpu won the prize for the best man's costume.

While the fancy dress ball at the Strand usually marks the beginning of the Summer season's end, Manager Herlihy reports that a large guest list will be at all three hotels for the entire month of September, despite a large exodus on the Sakaki Maru, which leaves Tsingtao on Sept. 3.

This has been a record season at the popular beach resort in the North and hotel accommodations have been taxed, although 25 additional rooms were added to the Grand Hotel Annex.

WOMEN DEMAND RECOGNITION IN CONSTITUTION

Peking Association To Ask For Inclusion Of Clauses

(China Press Correspondence)

Peking, August 14.—The Association for Women's Rights were hosts to the local newspapermen at the Peking Girls' Normal School on Shih Fu Ma Ta Chieh yesterday afternoon at two o'clock.

The Chairman of the meeting was Miss Chow Ming who dwelt on the fact that this organisation was a permanent one whose aim and purpose was to induce Parliament to write into the new Constitution such clauses as will guarantee the women of China a voice in the Government. She asked that branch organisations be formed throughout the Provinces to help attain this end.

Miss Chow laid down three ways in which the interests of the Association could best be furthered. First she suggests publicity in the form of circulars and frequent announcements in the press. Second, she would hold lectures to be given by prominent scholars and people interested in the movement.

Lastly, she advocates detailed investigations to be conducted by the promoters of the Association. The expenses for this work should be born by the Self Governing Society of the School.

Chancellor Tsai Yua-pei of the National University also spoke saying that he considered one of the first steps toward the realisation of their hopes should be that of co-education. He pointed out that the result of instituting this practice at the National University was not without its significance.

Tokio Editors Pay Northcliffe Tribute

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, August 14.—The news of Lord Northcliffe's death was received here with profound regret and sympathy.

The Asahi, reviewing his life, pays a tribute to the fighting spirit which impelled him to put forward his convictions in spite of all obstacles.

Lord Northcliffe was often severely critical of Japan, says the Yorodzu, but his faith in the welfare of humanity was too sincere to allow it be thought that his remarks were based on ill-will. Japan has lost one of her truest friend-critics, the paper declares.

GUARD BABY'S HEALTH IN THE HEAT

The hot months are the most dangerous to children. The complaints of this season, which are cholera, infantum, colic, diarrhoea and dysentery, come on so quickly that often a little one is beyond aid before the mother realizes he is ill. The mother must be on her guard to prevent these troubles, or if they do come on suddenly to cure them. No other medicine is of such aid to mothers during hot weather as is Baby's Own Tablets, the Canadian children's remedy. They regulate the stomach and bowels, cure indigestion, and constipation, relieve colic, check diarrhoea, allay teething pains, dispel colds and croup, banish worms, and are absolutely safe. Sold by medicine dealers, or by mail at 60 cents the vial from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 96 Szechuen Road, Shanghai.

ACTING PREMIER SEES NO WAY OUT OF MONEY TANGLE

Dr. Wang Says He Does Not See How Situation Can Be Saved

(Chung Mei Service)

Peking, August 14.—Dr. Wang Chung-hui is reported to be feeling that he cannot hold on as Premier. On Saturday after his troublesome time with the crowd at the Ministry of Education he went to the Cabinet meeting, which lasted very long, but he stayed only a short time.

The financial problem is the biggest stumbling block. Dr. Wang says he does not see how any man, however capable he may be, can save the situation unless money is forthcoming.

The Ministry of Finance, Mr. Kao Lin-wei, has sent three telegrams from Tientsin asking that his resignation be accepted. According to all reports, the new Cabinet has not met with much success in getting enough money to tide them over.

The vernacular papers have been talking about the fact that General Chang Shou-tseng, came to Peking to take over the Premiership. However, in Parliament there is a different feeling on this subject. At present that body is in favor of Dr. Wang. If he gets out they fear a military man will get in which will spell ruin for them.

However, the position calls for a superman and unless the provinces get busy and send in some money, it is hard to see anything but a declaration of bankruptcy by the Government in the near future.

However, Dr. Wang is working hard to cement the different troubles and get enough ready money to bridge the bad spell as has been the way with the premiers in the past. That he meets with little but discouragement is easily understood. There is some talk of salvation in an agreement with the foreign banks whereby $2,500,000 per month will be released for the Government to be secured on the various revenues.

This is contemplated as a temporary measure. Thus far there apparently has been little success to the scheme and Kao Lin-wei hesitates to assume his new post.

Feng To Turn Other Cheek To Bandits

(Independent News Service)

Hankow, August 14.—A batch of eighteen Chinese pastors and Christians, mostly of the American [illegible] Church Mission and the Wesleyan Mission in Wuhan, have been recruited to Kaifengfu by General Feng Yu-hsiang, the Christian Tuchun of Honan, who has adopted a policy of Christian love for outlaws and robbers who are now being arrested everywhere in Honan by government troops.

Instead of holding these bandits and robbers, who were mostly soldiers of Honan's former commander, General Chao Chieh, General Feng has decided to follow Biblical teachings and try to redeem sinners who are sons of God, notwithstanding their offenses on fellow men.

General Feng Yu-hsiang has been doing extensive Christian propaganda work among his troops in Honan. For the Christian enlightenment of his soldiers, he has invited to Kaifengfu many noted preachers and speakers from Hankow during the summer for holding summer conferences in the camps. He has recently asked the Hankow Churches to send at his expense all such preachers as they can conveniently relieve for Honan.

Kaifengfu is now the dumping ground for outlaws and robbers for whose suppression General Feng is conducting a vigorous campaign. He arrests them and sends them to Kaifengfu to be redeemed by Christian workers.

General Feng has been absent from Kaifeng for more than a week, according to the latest report, being engaged in fighting and arresting looters and robbers in Kweitehfu, Honan. Other detachments of his army are also at work arresting bandits in various parts of Honan, and soon the forces of jailers will have to be considerably increased in order to have the prisoners in proper charge.

Healthy Hitting Piles Up The Runs And Bills Saves Game With Brilliant Catch

Freddie Bills and a whole lot of base-hits including three homers gathered off Soldier Elliston and our old friend Parsuch of Fort Mills won and saved the fourth game of the series between Gallop's men and the Philippine champions at the ball park yesterday afternoon. Local batsmen rapped out ten healthy safeties for a total of 16 bases, in their six innings at bat, and then, when Major Dent's gang started a rally in the seventh after Scott dropped a fast hook on Massie's wrist and two were out and two more were on, Bills speared a cannon-like drive with only a few fingers of one hand and saved a tied score and possibly the whole game. The win yesterday puts the Shanghai nine into the winning column for the first time in the series. Ft. Mills had won three straight games. The local team now stands a fair chance of breaking even on the 6-game series.

Scott pitching for Shanghai deserved his win. He had all of his usual stuff, and his team mates were supporting him with generous clean-out hitting. He outpitched both Elliston and Parsuch, and would have found himself on the best end of the allowed-hits item had his playmates been up on real batting practice as are the soldiers. Elliston was yanked in the second inning when but one was out. Five straight hits, including two homers decided his captain to substitute Private Parsuch. The latter got by nicely though Scott worked better than he throughout.

Shanghai was lucky in the second inning. Kingman drove one over short for a sure-enough single. Hopkins flied one to right which was badly misjudged and missed. The ball went to the Parsee cricket nets for the circuit. Wilhoit Texas-leagued over second, a fair enough hit and Wood flied out to deep center. Wall followed with a duplicate of Hopkins' homer. Storalski again misjudged and missed the ball and Cy and Wall counted while Storalski was searching around in the Parsees paraphernalia again. Those two bits of bad judgment by Storalski helped Shanghai muchly.

Kingman's homer in the third inning was a real one. He lifted the ball out into right field, not far from the foul line, and he had practically rounded the four bags before it was retrieved from the ditch. Shanghai's fourth run came in the fourth when Wall, safe on Massie's wild throw of his grounder to first, stole second and scored on Holliday's single through Parsuch to center.

Fort Mills got into the scoring in the second inning when Aldinger tripled to left and came in on Cummings fly-out to Sammy Woods far back in left field. In the fourth Bills made the first put out on a beautiful spear of Aldinger's drive. Cummings, Lowe, Droski and Parsuch followed with singles. Hopkins booted Lowe's hit allowing extra bases to the batter and to Cummings. Droski was caught out at second and Browski flied out to center.

The visitors rallied in the seventh, putting one run over but losing the chance for a tie or better on Bill's sensational catch. Browski flied out to Bills, Massie was hit on the wrist, and went to second when Mumford pinch hitting for Storalski, beat out a slow one to Holliday. McGinnis in the mean time had been thrown out by Thatch. Aldinger's hit through third scored Massie, when with two still on, Bills speared Cumming's drive ending the game.

SAYS 'BUGS' Baer:

GINK KNEW A THING OR TWO

But Did You Ever Meet Anybody Who Ever Knew A Thing Or Three?

Dear you—

I was in Etherville when your man umpired a game between the Camel Drivers of Sahara and the Measle Defenders of Most islands.

There were three on base, six out and nobody present when the pitcher took a squint at Gink's non-partisan bankroll.

The catcher immediately switched the dope and signalled for a low, wide ambulance. The pitcher crossed him by throwing a high, fast Eskimo Pie. Gink couldn't miss a slow subpoena and all the runners escaped on a bad play at the gate.

When Gink stepped out on parole they presented him with a congratulatory wheel chair on the Renaissance period.

Yours in pain,
ZATSME.

St. Mary's Hospital, East Orange.

Everybody loves a loser. When the Four Horsemen of the Applesauce elected Lord Beaverbrook to their annual catastrophe, nobody suspected that Hollywood would ever become the capital of the world's juries.

But that was at a time when the banshees and the leperhorns ruled the world with a non-skid grin. When Gink told his Congressman that he would not support the plan to build charitable institutions for orphan blimps, the entire Board of Estimates broke into tears. Crying was the principal industry of Roughtown. The Mayor splintered many a reservoir when he wept over the fact that once in his youth he had thrown away a glass of beer because it had a fly in it.

This incident changed his entire life. He never recovered from the blow to his thirst and is perched out in the Laughing Room of the Roughtown Nut Orchard sobbing over his foamless career.

In the middle of the Roughtown Plaza was a junkyard dedicated to sympathetic statuary. The main dish in the debris was a heroic statue of a dog surrendering to a recipe for sausages. That's heroic enough for anybody.

When the league opened, the mob would organise a parade and step out to capture an umpire.

HUNAN PUTTING DR. SUN'S SCHEME INTO OPERATION

(Chung Mei Service)

Peking, Aug. 14.—A correspondent in Changsha comments on his observance of the working of the Constitutional Government established in Hunan on January 1. As pointed out by Governor Chow Heng-ti, the Constitution is meant to give self government to the people on all internal affairs and not to put the Province in a state of self sovereignty as regards the rest of China.

In fact, since the constitution, there has been less talk of independence. He claims that Hunan is merely trying to do in practice what President Li and Dr. Sun Yat-sen have recently been talking about.

They planned to have a Provincial Government run along the lines of the American and German system, rather than a strongly centralised organ like the French and Japanese governments. According to the authorities in Hunan, this will in no way interfere with the general scheme of reunification of China.

In fact, the Hunan Assembly thinks so much of their achievement, that they have sent representatives to Shanghai and other places to explain and advocate their system as proper for the rest of the country. By the provisions of this Constitution a new Assembly was elected at the end of March and immediately went into session.

The Governor should have been elected within three months but that has not been done yet. However, the names of seven candidates are about to be sent in and the election is expected to be consumated within a month.

Despite its newness with the ballot, Hunan acted up just like any old political bailiwick during the elections. Many charges of fraud were made and resulted in the losing parties going into law courts. As these courts were of little avail in giving prompt decisions the press was next appealed to.

It is said that in some cases ballot boxes were found to contain bundles of votes which never in the world could have gone in through the openings in the boxes. Votes were bought but not singly. They went in for things on a large scale and deals for the buying up of blocks of a hundred and a thousand votes were numerous.

Like the Central Government, Hunan has no money to run on and is just keeping ahead of the game by a slight margin. The Mint which was a losing proposition under the Government has been farmed out to private individuals in an attempt to make it pay.

Mission Project For Wuhan Cities

(Chung Mei Service)

Peking, August 14.—The University of Rochester has announced that it has undertaken a definite Foreign Mission project, which will be called "Rochester-in-Wuhan." The purpose is to create a sympathetic interest in the peoples of other lands through a special education and service program in the Wuhan cities in China.

They hope to get some of the alumni of the University of Rochester to work in Wuchang and Hankow and to endow scholarships, which will encourage Chinese students to go from those places to Rochester for their American training.

Ulobri Rubber Co.

At a special meeting of shareholders in the Ulobri Rubber Co., Ltd., (in liquidation) held on Wednesday at 2 Canton Road, Mr. Eric A. Prince, representing the general managers and liquidator, who presided, said:

"This meeting has been called pursuant to Section 188 of the Companies ordinances, in order that I may lay before you an account of the liquidation.

"The company, as you know, had an issue of debentures and these amounted to a total of Tls. 123,969. The company's property, viz., its rubber estate on Singapore Island, was, of course, vested in the trustees for the debenture holders and, on the liquidation of this company, they took charge of this, the only asset, and nothing has come into my possession. After protracted negotiations, the estate was sold and realised a sum of only Straits $80,000 and during this period a considerable sum of money had to be spent on the upkeep of the property.

The actual net amount available for distribution to debenture holders, after deducting expenses, amounted to Tls. 33,134.19 giving a return to the debenture holders of 26,727 percent., so, therefore, there can be no return to shareholders. That is all I have to say, gentlemen. If any shareholder has any questions to ask, I shall be glad to answer to the best of my ability."

There were no questions.

Southern Troops Capture Chungking, Put 'Coalition' Generals To Flight

(China Press Correspondence)

Hankow, August 17.—Kuomingtang forces have captured Chungking according to the latest reports from up river and the fighting has ended in a disastrous defeat for the coalition forces of Generals Liu Hsiang and Yang Sen. The latter has fled from Chungking to Fowchow while Liu Hsiang is a fugitive here in Hankow where he proposes to take steamer for Shanghai.

Liu Chen-hsung is now supreme in Szechuen and another spoke has been thrust into the wheels of Wu Pei-fu's centralised, bureaucratic government scheme. With Tang Chi-yao holding the reins in Yunnan and Liu in Szechuen, the back blocks of China are setting the pace for provincial self government in such a fashion that Peking may wake up to find several autonomous governments safely established in its purlieus, using the taxes for provincial upbuilding and telling the central government that its resources are curtailed by the revenues of two great provinces, not to say independent kingdoms.

How far this idea will spread is dependent upon the early realisation of Peking that a central government must be more than a political race course or polo field where the only ball on which the eye is kept is the pelf that may be dragged down.

The "we-should-worry-about-the-people" attitude is getting close to its finish according to the messages that have emanated from the victorious Szechuen leader, whose governmental plans met such approval on the part of the people that no succor was available for the vanquished and their forces are being hunted down with zest by the villagers of the country side.

It is expected that a conference soon may be called by Hunan province to bring its scheme of self government before the other provinces which are now planning autonomy. While the Yunnan and Szechuen schemes are too new to have formulated their plans, it is certain that their adherence to Dr. Sun's plan is likely to prove a serious stumbling block in the way of Wu Pei-fu whose centralised, bureaucratic scheme of government is a bit too "German" to interest the Chinese who always have had a practically autonomous government in the villages, no matter what form was prevalent in the hsien cities.

(Independent News Service)

Hankow, August 14.—General Wu Pei-fu is trying to finance a military expedition into Szechuen which he has placed in the hands of General Sun Chuen-fang, Defence Commissioner of the Upper Yangtsze. At first he asked General Hsiao Yao-nan of Wuchang to supply money and ammunitions to reinforcements to be sent to Szechuen, but Hsiao flatly refused to do so on the ground that Hupeh finances are singularly distressed at the moment.

General Sun Chuen-fang is forging ahead with his schemes to rescue Szechuen from falling into the hands of Kuomingtang forces which are now clinching with troops of Yang Sen and Liu Hsiang. He is about to move five mixed brigades of troops from Ichang, Kweichowfu and Chungking, where Liu Hsiang and Yang Sen are being hemmed in by their enemies from Chengtu. Meantime he is waiting for money before he embarks on an expeditionary scheme into the Yangtsze Gorges.

General Wu while perfectly willing to render assistance to Yang and Liu in maintaining their power and prestige in Szechuen, considers it necessary for Szechuen, or in other words, Generals Yang and Liu, to pay for the military operations to be started on their behalf.

He has telegraphed to Chungking asking Liu and Yang to secure money in order that General Sun Chuen-fang's troops may leave Ichang to their rescue at Chungking.

It appears that, pending some definite arrangement being made on military expenditures, General Sun will have to hold his men at Ichang, as both Loyangfu and Wuchang are short of money.

The greatest concern in the present conflict is Szechuen that is worrying General Wu Pei-fu is apparently not the waning of power of Generals Yang Sen and Liu Hsiang. It is the more consequential issue that is looming behind the superficial chaos. The loss of positions of General Yang Sen and Liu Hsiang would not have been so serious, had it not been for the fact that the unrestrained development of power of their enemies Kuomingtang forces under General Liu Chen-hsun and other southwestern Kuomingtang men, would mean the irretrievable loss of Szechuen from the northern government.

The gain on the part of Kuomingtang men will lead them into more ambitious schemes, the worst of which is probably the "third government" proposition.

In the sequestered provinces of the southwest, the "third government" talk is now broadcasted and bids fair to evolve a successful organisation. Emissaries are travelling from one province to another on the consolidation of a third government in China from among Szechuen, Yunnan, Kweichow, Hunan, Kwangsi and Kwangtung, General Tang Chi-yao of Yunnan is reported to be actively connected with the third government project.

General Wu Pei-fu is worrying over this southwestern situation. He has appointed many intelligence agents in the various provinces and is planning to take back Szechuen to the Peking government, before the danger enlarges.

The Hope Of The World

COLLAPSE of the London Conference creates a new and perhaps the most serious financial bog that Europe has ever been called upon to face. As we see it, no solution, if we except general bankruptcy and that is not a solution, is possible unless the United States and Great Britain shall succeed in reaching a working agreement. We believe that a preliminary understanding along this line, the financial succoring of Europe, was accomplished during the Washington Conference, to be fully matured sometime this Autumn or Winter. According to this alleged understanding a Financial Conference was to be held in Washington. All principal powers were to be represented.

Later, and in view of developments, it must have been considered essential to call the London Conference in the hope that certain arrangements, as between France and Germany, could be made which would, so to speak, set the stage for a final agreement at Washington. The London Conference would at least give the Washington Government an inkling of how far the other powers were willing to go and thus enable it to formulate a program based on what it would have to sacrifice on the part of the American people. A new Washington Conference, therefore is, in view of the London Conference's break-down, the present hope of the world.

The desperate thing that British and American observers see, is the hopelessness of any real yielding on the part of France vis-a-vis Germany and the imminent financial collapse of Germany, which in turn, according to their summing up, will inevitably involve France in the same crash.

Mr. A. G. Gardiner, for many years editor of the London Daily News, feels that American and British bankers and statesmen have got to stand together in this crisis. "The situation in Europe," says Mr. Gardiner, "is fast passing beyond control. Poincare is leading Europe in a mad dance of death." He said this before the London Conference.

The Nation (New York) says: "That that German collapse is impending and that the danger is bona fide and not a cry of wolf raised by the Germans to avoid proper payments appears from two statements just published by American officials. Mr. Charles E. Herring, commercial attache of our embassy in Berlin, cabling to the State Department after the death of Dr. Rathenau, dwelt at length upon the ominous aspects of the situation. It is a fair summary of his opinion to say that he sees Germany steadily disintegrating.

"Mr. W. F. Upson, commercial attache of our Vienna legation, in an interview cabled from Berlin, declares that there will shortly be a financial collapse in Germany similar to that of Austria. He states that the German public has lost its former buying power and that industry is reducing production, chiefly because of the difficulty of getting bank credits and help in floating new stock issues. . . . Yet it is perfectly obvious that if production in Germany is checked by any one of several causes and unemployment ensues, bloodshed, disorder, and industrial and governmental chaos will be at hand."

As Mr. Gardiner puts it: "Corpses are not healthy neighbors. The present insanity spells ruin for France as well as the rest. She is the most self-contained nation of Europe, but she cannot live alone. . . . With the mark waste paper the vertebra of the European financial system is broken."

The Nation in conclusion says: "Even with all the increasingly heavy domestic burdens upon him President Harding has no more pressing duty than to take up at once definite negotiations with France for the reduction of her indebtedness to us in return for a definite and reasonable policy toward Germany, not in the interest of Germany so much as in the interest of the entire world."

Advent Of The Railway In Palestine

Ramleh is, for Palestine, a fair sized town, with some considerable buildings of no great interest. But outside the town is a tower of great age, and underneath this are the catacombs of an old monastery dating back to the Crusades. This tower is a landmark for the surrounding country, which stretches away westward, a fertile plain, for some fifteen miles to Jaffa and the sea. To the north-east lies Ludd, with an ancient Church of St. George, and from four to six miles beyond Ludd ran the British front, in a rough line across the hills of Judaea, from Jaffa to Jerusalem. . . . After a week in our olive grove we moved into a big monastery, the largest building in Ramleh, a veritable barrack of a place. . . . Before long General Headquarters moved on to a beautiful spot, on sandy soil, only three miles short of Ramleh, and, in a month or two, the railway was brought up to it. We were now, therefore, linked up with Egypt, and, in consequence, comforts began to arrive and increase. . . .

It was interesting to watch the advent of the railway. The construction slipped along over that level, marine plain at a rate, I believe, of nearly two miles a day. . . . As soon as the railway reached the neighborhood of Ludd a wonderful transformation took place. Large marquees sprang up like mushrooms in every direction. Casualty clearing stations, ordnance stores, et hoc genus omne appeared, and a busy town of canvas covered the country. This meant that the new railroad was coming to Ludd. The very vastness of the preparations made us think that Allenby must be planning a further advance, and that the Syrian campaign had a future before it.

While at Ramleh I got an opportunity of visiting Jerusalem. In company with the late Adjutant of the Somersets, who had recently joined Divisional Headquarters, I drove in a car to Junction Station, and there boarded a lorry. As we went up the Pass we marvelled greatly at the recent feat of arms, and, when we had left Enab behind, and began to wind round the steep ascent to the city, we realised the truth of the Psalmist's words. "The hills stand about Jerusalem," and the same feeling was, I think, in his mind when he wrote, "Jerusalem is built as a city which is at unity with itself, for thither the tribes go up. . . ."

There it lies, enfolded in its own hills, but crowning the skyline, and gazing down on the farther side of the Valley of Jordan and the Dead Sea. . . . The effect of the British occupation on the population followed in fact, the usual course; from amazement at its moderation and efficiency to a placid acceptance of the blessings which it brought in its train.—A. F. L. Bacon, in "The Wanderings of a Temporary Warrior."

Russian Books -:- By Avrahm Yarmolinsky

In Russia the literary fashion of the day is to publish volumes containing odds and ends by classic writers which for various reasons were never before printed. A natural impetus to this adventure has been given by the opening of State and private archives. The great Pushkin is of course the first victim. No extant scrap of paper upon which he scribbled is likely to escape if this fury for the inedit continues. The archives have also yielded a volume of unpublished material by Nekrasov, the poet of the peasant epic, "Who Can Be Happy in Russia?" The Central Archives of the State have published a hitherto unknown episode from Dostoyevski's "The Possessed," together with a plan for an unwritten novel. They also have in preparation a volume of Dostoyevski's letters and note books.

A new volume of Chekhov's letters has been added to the six already published Collections of new letters by both Tolstoy and Turgenev are also finding their way into print. Hitherto inaccessible writings from the pen of Radishchev, Goncharov and of that rare poet-thinker Tyutchev are being prepared for publication. Perhaps the most varied book of this type is "The Rainbow," a volume the makeup of which recalls that of Russia's early nineteenth century anthologies. It is a miscellany of unpublished material covering the period from the eighteenth century court poet Dershavin to Chekhov. Here we find a curious piece of writing by the prince of Russian novelists, Ivan Turgenev. We are accustomed to think of him as an agnostic. He lost his faith early in life, and although in later years a mystic streak is discovered in him he never regained that belief in a personal God which is essential to an attitude of prayer. Replying to a request for a statement of his outlook, he wrote in 1875, at the age of 57: "Briefly, let me say that I am chiefly a realist. . . . To everything supernatural I am indifferent. . . . I do not believe in any absolutes or systems. . . ." In direct contradiction of all this we find in "The Rainbow" two devout prayers by Turgenev, which follow below:

"My gracious Lord and God, permit me to throw myself at Thy feet with a humble prayer. God grant me relief from my suffering, hold out to me the hand of help, hear my bitter groaning, look charitably upon my tears. My God, my God, do not remember the sins of my youth; do not let me fall into despair, comfort my downcast and hopeless spirit. Lord, help me, spare me. Oh, my God spare me, the poor, the ailing one; hear my weeping; Lord, let me draw my breath!"

"Gracious Lord, I thank Thee from the depths of my heart for the relief from my illness. Let the quiet joy of the appeased heart be my prayer before Thee. Lord, favor me with Thy continued aid; let it always dwell in my memory, so that I may not sink into oblivicusness and indifference, but that I may always remember Thy grace. Lord, I thank Thee."

The time yellowed sheet on which these prayers were written in Turgenev's own hand was found among the papers of his friend, the distinguished poet Yakov Polonski. Penciled on the lower margin are the words, "I. S. Turgenev in his youth. Wanted to tear up." The editor of the document, however, believes that Turgenev was no longer a young man when he wrote these unexpected supplications. He suspects that they were actually penned in the winter of 1856-57, when the novelist, at the age of 38, was suffering acutely from an attack of bladder trouble, and that they came into Polonski's hands when he was staying at Turgenev's estate twenty-five years later. The lapse of a quarter of a century would account for Polonski's failure to date the manuscript more accurately. It remains for the biographers of Turgenev to find the solution of the puzzling psychological problem which this find poses.

In addition to the books devoted to the literary history of a period which seems somewhat remote there are also collections of recent literary memorabilia. Among these the most attractive is a volume of reminiscences about the late author of "He Who Gets Slapped." The articles of which the book consists throw much light upon Leonid Andreyev both as man and as artist. From the accounts of Chukovski, Blok, Chulkov and Teleshov one gets a composite picture of a sensitive, erratic, nervous, emotionally prodigal makeup, the temperament of an artist and a phantast. Typically enough, his habits of life were peculiar. He would get up when the sun was high, breakfast on oceans of tea and then perhaps receive visitors, to whom he talked until his voice was tired, although their ears might not be. Three o'clock was his dinner hour; then he slept off the effects of his meal and at 8 o'clock resumed his tea drinking and burned up countless cigarettes as he finally sat down to a night at his desk. Writing took possession of him like a frenzy. The toxins of fatigue and the stimulants which he employed brought on hallucinations, and when he was writing his terrible indictment of war, "The Red Laugh," he was tormented by fever and was so nervous that he was afraid to stay alone in his study, so that his wife had to sit with him through his nightly labors. His writing was invariably improvisatory. A lack of the gift of self-criticism made him unable to polish or perfect it. He threw himself into it with the same reckless violence with which he adopted one curious hoppy after the other. There was something histrionic about his behavior as there was something theatrical about the background which he created for himself. Like an actor he despised the public whose applause he craved. His fads ranged from yachting to color photography. In 1908 he built himself a villa in Finland, whose austere and rigid architecture was utterly at variance with the soft lineaments of the owner's nature.

But despite his chameleon changes of mood and fancy one fundamental attitude persisted: Andreyev's pre-occupation with death. "He pronounced the word 'death' in a peculiar way," writes Chukevski. "emphatically and sensuously as some sensualists pronounced the word 'woman.' . . . His true calling was to experience the horror and fear of death." After the loss of his first wife he was found one day by Maxim Gorky sitting before the fireplace of an old, gloomy house at Capri with his small son on his knees telling the child a story of how death goes about choking little children. The terror of death is the leit-motif of his work. It thrust upon him one of the oddest of collections: a batch of last letters addressed to him by suicides. Alternating with fits of gaiety, he suffered from attacks of acute melancholia, and it was during these perhaps that he succumbed to hereditary alcoholism. The spell of heavy drinking would last two or three days. "Even then he remained true to himself, to his main theme, the fear of death," writes Chulkov, "and these tormenting thoughts and blind emotions waxed in his mind into huge, fantastic shadows, with whom he held converse in verbose and confused language, with passion and tears." He was a phantast to whom the imagined was more vivid than the real. For this reason he once declared to a friend, until he learned to free his imaginative impulse in writing, he found his greatest release in intoxication "and its marvelous and terrible dreams."

One gets, perhaps, the most intimate view of Andreyev from Maxim Gorky's contribution to this volume. The two men were bound by a close and enduring friendship. In 1915 Andreyev gave Gorky a set of his works and inscribed them as follows: "Beginning with 'Bergamot' (one of Andreyev's early stories) everything these volumes contain was written under your eyes, Alexey (Gorky's true given name); in many respects they are the history of our relationship." This friendship was by no means based upon a common attitude toward life. "There was hardly a fact or a question," writes Gorky, "upon which we agreed. But the endless difference did not prevent us from having a mutual attitude of intense interest and attention, which is rarely the result even of many years of friendship. We talked tirelessly. On one occasion I recall we sat together over twenty hours at a stretch and emptied several samovarfuls of tea—Leonid imbibed fantastic quantities of it." Gorky embodied the opponent against whom Andreyev's books were, in a sense, directed. The essential difference between the two is stated with fine lucidity: "For me," writes Gorky, "man is always a victor, even if he is mortally wounded or dying. His striving for self-knowledge and for knowledge of nature is beautiful, and although his life is painful he continually extends its borders by creating with his mind wise science, miraculous art. . . ." Andreyev's outlook was diametrically opposed to this: "To Andreyev man always seemed, spiritually indigent; made up of irreconcilable contradictions of instinct and intellect, he is forever deprived of the possibility of attaining inner harmony. All his works are vanity of vanities, dust and deception. And above all, he is the slave of death, and all his life he is leashed to it." Then again, to Gorky's reason, thought is "the source of everything existing." Andreyev, on the contrary, felt reason to be the devil's vaudeville, empty of meaning and substance. "You see," he once said to Gorky, "we need a new kind of reason, not this lying charlatan. . . . He takes my best energies, all my feelings, and although he promises to return them with interest he returns nothing, saying 'tomorrow.' 'Evolution,' he says, and when my patience is exhausted, and the thirst for life chokes me, he says 'revolution.' And he deceives me filthily. And I die, receiving nothing."

Gorky adds a few interesting strokes to the portrait of his friend which comes alive in the pages of the book. Andreyev confessed to Gorky that he had said to himself at the age of fourteen that he would either be famous or commit suicide. Yet he wrote with difficulty, preferring talk to composition. He was a brilliant, somewhat egocentric, conversationalist. As for his writing, Gorky declares that Andreyev "treated his talent the way a bad rider treats a fine horse: he rode it to exhaustion and took no care of it." For reading he had no taste, and the classics were anathema to him. The exceptions to this rule were Schopenhauer, whom he read in his youth, and Edgar Allan Poe, for whom he had a great enthusiasm. In the first version of his exceedingly curious piece, "Judas Iscariot," Andreyev made some errors which betrayed the fact that he did not even take the trouble of reading the Gospels carefully. He hated science as an abject submission to fact. His mind had a fatal tendency to run off at a tangent into the most painful and insoluble problems of life and death. "In all that related to the dark sides of life, contradictions in the soul of man, the obscure agitations of the instincts, he was uncannily keen."

Andreyev's last years were filled with black anguish and confusion. He was unable to comprehend the political situation, and the events of the catastrophic period roused in him nothing but terror. He died in Finland, utterly alone, a heart-broken, voluntary exile. His posthumous works include a short narrative and an unfinished novel, "Satan's Diary," which has already appeared in English, as well as two dramas, "The Dog Waltz" and "Samson in Chains," the former bearing the sub-title, "A Poem of Solitude," which appeared in the last issue of a Russian monthly published in Paris. It is reported that both of these plays will be staged and published shortly. Andreyev also left a journal which, together with his correspondence, it is said is being prepared for publication by his widow. In this connection one recalls a remark which Andreyev once made to Gorky: "Confessions, memoirs and similar writings are the excrement of the soul, poisoned by poor food."

A Coffee Discovery

According to an Arabian legend, Hadji Omar, a pious Dervish, was outlawed from Mocha in the year 1285. When almost dying of hunger in the wilderness, he roasted some of the small round berries he found growing wild in the thickets. A few of the roasted berries accidentally fell into his drinking water, and thus coffee was discovered.

Exchange Fluctuations

Asia Banking Corporation

August 17, 1922

Spot Bar Silver was unchanged and forward up ⅛d in London yesterday.

The New York price advanced to 69⅞ cents and the London-New York cross rate to 447⅝.

The only changes in our Official quotations here today were a rise in the Gold dollar rate to 75½ and in the Franc rate to 950.

Our market opened firm this morning, became strong later on but eased off again slightly at the tiffin interval.

Business at the opening was done in Sterling at 3-5⅝ and Gold Dollars at 77⅝.

Banks were good sellers at these rates and the market firmed up until as high as 3-5 15-16 for Sterling and 78⅛ for Gold Dollars was done. However, some buyers came out at these rates with the result that the market eased off slightly and at the tiffin interval there were sellers of Sterling at 3-5⅝ and Gold Dollars at 77⅜ with buyers at 35⅜ and 77⅜ respectively.

The market steadied up again in the afternoon and the Official Sterling rate was raised to 3s. 5⅛d. and Gold Dollars to 77, the Yen rate dropped to 62½ and the other rates changed in proportion. This change in rates made little difference in the market although a small amount of business was done in Sterling as high as 3s. 5⅜d. and Gold Dollars at 78. There were however, at all times buyers at these rates and at the close banks were sellers at 3s. 5⅜d. and 77⅜.

There were very few bills offering today, banks were quoting 3-6½ for Sterling bills and 79¼ for Gold Dollar Bills.

The best buyers of Franc bills were quoting 1015 although 1020 was the general quotation, but there were very few offering.

China bought silver in London yesterday and the market is reporter as steady, as is also the New York market.
